NATIONAL WHIG NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT. GENERAL WINFIELD SCOTT, OF NEW JERSEY.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT WILLIAM A. GRAHAM, OF NORTH CAROLINA

Washington Whig Club.

The regular meetings of this Club are held in the hall over Copp's Saloon at 8 o'clock on Wednesday evenings.

The EXECUTIVE Committee of the Washington Whig Club are requested to meet at their hall on Saturday evening, July 24th. A full meeting is earnestly desired. By order: S. A. H. McKIM, Secretary,

The New Secretary of the Navy.

We have the pleasure to announce that the nomination of the Hon. JOHN P. KENNEDY, of Maryland, to this office, was last evening confirmed by the United States Senate.

"Look upon this Picture-and on This!" No impartial man can read the record of the Baltimore Democratic Convention without realizing the conviction that Gen. Pierce was there nominated solely because he was comparatively an obscure, unmeritorious, and insignicant man. While the names of Cass, Marcy, Dickinson, Houston, Buchanan, Douglas, &c., were before that Convention, he was unnamed, and perhaps unthought of. The inability of the friends of these gentlemen to come together in the support of any one of them created a necessity for the selection of a candidate who could not provoke their envy or wound their vanity; and in Gen. rel among them did not terminate. It was simply postponed for four years; and for that period of time they were anxious to procure as their of time they were anxious to procure as their revenge upon the Faculty. He posted himself at the gates of the college, with his fifer and drumbe, an inferior man, who would only make their mer, and up and down before the terrace he party grieve that one of themselves had not been chosen.

The littleness of Gen. Pierce, therefore, was the basis of the compromise upon him. No and, pointing to the flag of the country, called statesmanlike deeds had ever heralded his name to his countrymen, and no deeds of valor in war had ever illustrated his heroism. It was simply hoped or believed that in his narrow path of mediscrity he had never disgraced himself, and that therefore he could be kept in position while his friends should hurl vituperative slander and the most disgusting abuse at the noble old hero to whom they knew it would be folly to oppose any living man on the grounds of his positive merits.

Humiliating indeed is a comparison of the two candidates, and discreditable to our national reputation the thought that the freemen of this republic can "this fair mountain leave to batten on this moor!" The comparison indeed is as that of "Hyperion to a satyr!" But it is sure to meet with a stern rebuke from a just and patriotic people, before whom the party tricksters shall yet hang their heads in discomfiture and shame!

Life of Gen. Pierce.

The only book of this kind that we can find is on sale at Mr. Joe Shillington's, and is entitled as follows: "The Life of Gen. Frank. Pierce, the Granite Statesman: with a Biographical Sketch of Hon. Wm. Rufus King, Vice President of the United States. By Hermitage.-Tenth Thousand .- New York: Published by Cornish, Lamport & Co., H. Long & Brother, and for sale by all the Booksellers in the United States."

A book with such a title ought to be pretty much of a book; and we shall therefore make some quotations from it, with new headings, as interpolated by the Cincinnati Atlas. We wouch for the authenticity of the extracts, ridiculous as they appear:

1 .- How Gen. Pierce's father was trained up in the school of an old Federalist, and how he made his sons Federalists like himself.

"This veteran patriot, who had been trained in the school of Washington, and the perils of the Revolution, brought up his children with the same high moral, political, and social principles in which he had been trained, and he made his sons such men as himself."

2. - How Col. Ben. Pierce, his brother, was turned he took revenge on the old fogies of Dartmouth.

"He was pursuing his classical studies in Dartmouth College, where Daniel Webster was educated, and he appears to have been making creditable progress. But when the first blast of the war of 1812 was heard, he is said to have become so fractious and insubordinate that it was considered necessary to expel him from the college. "We are without information," says the land; but we cannot say that we feel any apprehen sions on the point, and we shall await the final election not without share in the confidence of many American friends that it will result well."

During Gen. Pierce's service in Congress, the question of the tariff was withdrawn from discussion in the halls of national legislation by the gradual and prospective action of the Compromise of 1832-'33. We have, therefore, no direct votes of the New Hampshire statesman-if we may call him so—on the subject of the tariff. But his position on that question is not liable to doubt. His extreme hostility to the improvement of rivers and harbors, as indicated by a continuous series of votes in both houses of Congress, denotes clearly enough the political school to which he be-The resolutions of the Convention which longs. Co-operation with England, to use the phrase-ology of the London journal above quoted, stands in direct contrast with a distinctive American policy.
